The Gauss Contests are the first in a series of mathematics contests administered by the CMC for students in Canadian schools. In 2002, 195 000 students enrolled at all levels, with just over 77 000 writing the Gauss paper.

Mathematics contests, as designed by the Canadian Mathematics Competition, have several goals. The first, and by far the most important, is to provide an enrichment activity that complements the school curriculum and helps students develop their capability to solve challenging problems. Other goals include: providing an enjoyable extra-curricular activity for students and teachers, encouraging the pursuit of excellence, and awakening in students an awareness of their mathematical ability. We believe that students who prepare for and write mathematics contests will derive much enjoyment and satisfaction from successfully solving new and challenging problems. In addition, contests provide teachers with a library of problems suitable for classroom use.

While many people like to use contest results to compare their students to others, this is not the intent. There is no passing or failing grade on a contest, there is only an individual's own self comparison to be concerned about. Hopefully students can learn through their experiences writing contests, both about mathematics and themselves. This is why we do not publish comparative results of any form for the Gauss Contest.

This report includes a summary of student performance on the 2002 Gauss Contests. We do not have statistics for all students since reporting results is voluntary, but the enclosed results represent more than 37 000 of the participants. The median scores were considerably higher this year; 97.1 in grade 7 and 90.6 in grade 8. This is due to several factors including a more accessible early part of the paper, and, perhaps, the increase in reported results. All participants are to be congratulated, and I hope that you continue to derive some enjoyment from participation in Our contests.

Les Concours Gauss sont les premiers d'une série de concours de mathématiques administrés dans les écoles canadiennes par le Concours canadien de mathématiques. En 2002, des 195 000 étudiants inscrits aux différents cycles, près de 77 000 ont relevé le défi Gauss.

Les concours de mathématiques conçus par le Concours canadien de mathématiques poursuivent plusieurs objectifs. Le premier, et de loin le plus important, consiste à présenter une activité d'enrichissement qui vient s'ajouter aux programmes d'études tout en permettant aux étudiants d'accroître leur habileté à résoudre des problèmes difficiles. Ces concours présentent aussi aux enseignants comme aux étudiants une activité parascolaire agréable, qui encourage la recherche de l'excellence et amène les étudiants à prendre conscience de leurs aptitudes en mathématiques. Nous considérons que les étudiants qui se préparent à ces concours et relèvent le défi retirent beaucoup de plaisir et une grande satisfaction à trouver la solution de problèmes nouveaux et stimulants. Ces concours viennent de plus enrichir les banques de problèmes des enseignants d'une moisson de nouveaux problèmes à présenter en classe.

Les concours servent souvent de prétexte à la comparaison des résultats de ses élèves avec ceux d'autres classes ou d'autres écoles. Bien entendu, les concours ont un tout autre objectif. Ils visent avant tout à renseigner les participants au sujet de leur progression, d'où l'absence de note de passage. Nous souhaitons vivement que les concours soient une riche source d'apprentissage pour la population étudiante tant sur le plan mathématique que personnel. Voilà pourquoi nous ne publions pas de bulletins comparatifs du Concours Gauss.

Vous trouverez dans le présent rapport un bilan du rendement des élèves lors de l'édition 2000 des concours Gauss. Nous ne disposons pas de données statistiques de tous les participants, la transmission des résultats n'étant pas obligatoire. Le rapport présente cependant les résultats de plus de trente-sept mille d'entre eux. Les notes moyennes de la dernière édition sont particulièrement élevées : 97,1 p. cent pour les élèves de septième année et 90,6 p. cent pour ceux de huitième. On peut attribuer ces résultats à de nombreux facteurs, dont une première partie plus facile et, sans doute, le nombre accru de résultats transmis. Nous tenons à féliciter tous les élèves qui y ont participé. Nous espérons que nos concours continueront à les passionner et qu'ils y participeront à
