

Problem of the Week

Problem E

One More Coin

A coin collecting club has between 12 and 30 members attend its monthly meeting. For one such meeting, they noticed that all of the members present each had the same number of coins except one member who had one more coin than each of the other members. Between them, the members had a total number of 1000 coins.

How many members attended the meeting?

